Foreword

In 1965, the Bureau of Economic Analysis (then the Office of Business Economics) published Growth Patterns in Employment by County, 1940-1950 and 1950-1960, regional volumes 1-8. These volumes contained employment by county, State, and region by industry for 1940, 1950, and 1960, as well as an analysis of changes in employment over each of the two decades. With the publication of the 1970 Census of Population, employment data for another decennial census point became available. There have been numerous requests for the additional data in a format compatible with the previously published series. Moreover, the Bureau's regional projections program and other analytical applications rely on the Census Bureau's county employment series for a portion of their historical basis. This has generated a substantial demand for the employment data at the county level.

Acknowledgments

The publication project was initially undertaken by the Regional Economics Division of the Bureau in collaboration with Resources for the Future, Inc. This collaboration resulted in a special census of population employment tabulation to permit industrial groupings for 1970 as a comparable extension of the previously published series. The extended series, 1940, 1950, 1960, and 1970, prepared from census materials and with the advice of the Bureau of the Census, constitutes the basis for the present publication.

Within the Bureau of Economic Analysis, the project was jointly carried forward by the Regional Economic Measurement Division, Edwin J. Coleman, Chief and the Regional Economic Analysis Division, Daniel H. Garnick, Chief. Lowell D. Ashby, Assistant Chief of the Regional Economic Measurement Division provided general supervision of the joint project. David W. Cartwright, Chief and Evelyn Richardson, Economist, Data and Systems Branch, Regional Economic Analysis Division developed the data files and tables for local, State, and regional areas, including adjustments for industrial and geographic comparability over the period 1940 to 1970. Computer programing for the preparation of the tables for the Government Printing Office's Linotron process was handled by Claudia Harkins of the Computer Systems and Services Division. Graphics materials were prepared by Billy Jo Hurley. Mary Moul performed the secretarial services.

Preface

This volume presents employment by industry by county from the decennial censuses of population for 1940, 1950, 1960, and 1970. These employment data are drawn from the resident, as opposed to the de jure, population of the United States. Thus Federal military and Federal civilian employees stationed overseas are excluded.

Employment defined

The census of population in 1970 defined employment as follows:

"Employed persons comprise all civilians 16 years old and over who were either (a) 'at work'--those who did any work at all as paid employees or in their own business or profession, or on their own farm, or who worked 15 hours or more as unpaid workers on a family farm or in a family business; or (b) were 'with a job but not at work'--those who did not work during the reference week but had jobs or businesses from which they were temporarily absent due to illness, bad weather, industrial dispute, vacation, or other personal reasons. Excluded from the employed are persons whose only activity consisted of work around the house or volunteer work for religious, charitable, and similar organizations." 1/

The labor force definition in the censuses of population for 1940, 1950, and 1960 covered persons 14 years old and over. Since the relevant questions were put to all persons 14 years and over in the 20 percent sample of 1970, it was possible to obtain a special tabulation of civilian employees 14 years of age and over for comparability with the three previous census enumerations.

In addition to employed civilians, the data include those on active duty in the Federal military. Data on the Federal military were explicitly included in the censuses of population for 1970, 2/ 1960, and 1950. In the census of population for 1940, however, the Federal military were counted as part of "government" for local areas. In order to provide this information as a separate industrial item, the Bureau of the Census prepared an estimate of Federal military by county in 1940. This estimate was then subtracted from the count of "government" employees.

Through inclusion of Federal military, the information presented here is broader than that for the civilian employed. At the same time, it falls short of the total labor force, since it does not include the unemployed. The Federal military were included to present a more complete manpower picture in its national, regional, State, and local dimensions.

Industrial classification for civilian employees

While information in the present compilation is drawn from the last four censuses of population, it has not been published in precisely the form in which it now appears. The previous publication nearest to present form was Growth Patterns

Also note that since the age bracket 14-15 is not represented in the Federal military, the tabulation 14 years of age and over is conceptually the same as that for Federal military 16 years of age and over in 1970. Also see note below.

in Employment by County 1940-1950 and 1950-1960 published by region in eight volumes in 1965 by the Office of Business Economics. 3/ In that publication, in order to achieve a high degree of comparability for data from the censuses of 1940, 1950, and 1960, some industrial categories were combined. The resulting comparable set included 30 identified civilian categories plus an industry-not-reported line. Subsequently, five additional industry groups were added for 1950 and 1960, 4/ bringing the total to 35 identified civilian industries plus an industry-not-reported line. Comparable data were available for 1970 from the special tabulation mentioned above.

In the present publication, 35 identified civilian industries are presented for each area for 1970, 1960, and 1950, together with 30 groups for 1940. Since the industry-not-reported line has been distributed to the other civilian groups, 5/ individual industry groups have been changed while the civilian total across these groups remains unaffected. To make clear the total employment allocated, however, the former industry not reported is shown as the last line on each table. 6/

3/ Hereafter referred to as Growth Patterns 1965.

4/ Electrical and other machinery was divided into machinery, except electrical and electrical machinery, equipment and supplies, using published census data. Four additional groups (paper and allied products, petroleum and related industries, primary metal industries and fabricated and not specified metals) were broken out of the other and miscellaneous manufacturing group, using published census and other data.

5/ Industry not reported has never been associated with the Federal military because the latter is more an easily identified employment status than an industrial category. Thus, it is thought to be highly infrequent than an industry-not-reported employee would be properly classified as a member of the Federal military.

6/ The allocation of industry not reported to other civilian categories was made possible by the 1970 special tabulation. In addition to the presentation of materials for the 35 civilian industry groups, this tabulation showed allocations of the industry not reported to 14 major industry divisions. This was done on the basis of a data processing convention which assigned records lacking an industry classification to a most probable industry division. (See U.S. Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census, Census of Population: 1970. General Social and Economic Characteristics. Final Report PC (1)-C1 United States Summary, Appendix B-24.) The 14 major industry divisions and the groups they encompass are as follows:

Industry division	Industry groups included
Agriculture, forestry, and fisheries	Agriculture and agricultural services Forestry and fisheries
Mining	Mining
Construction	Contract construction
Manufacturing durable goods	Lumber, wood products, and furniture Machinery, except electrical Electrical machinery, equipment and supplies Motor vehicles and motor vehicle equipment Transportation equipment except motor vehicles Primary metal industries Fabricated and not specified metals Miscellaneous manufacturing (durable)

Industry division	Industry groups included
Manufacturing nondurable goods	Food and kindred products Textile mill products Apparel and other fabricated textile products Printing, publishing, and allied industries Chemicals and allied products Paper and allied products Petroleum refining and related industries Miscellaneous manufacturing (nondurable)
Transportation, communication, and public utilities	Railroads and railway express Trucking and warehousing Other transportation Communication Electric, gas, and sanitary services
Wholesale trade	Wholesale trade
Retail trade	Food and dairy products stores Eating and drinking places Other retail trade
Finance, insurance, and real estate	Finance, insurance, and real estate
Personal services	Lodging places and other personal services Private households
Business and repair services	Business and repair services
Entertainment and recreation services	Entertainment and recreation services
Professional and related services	Professional services
Public administration	Public administration

Several additional steps completed the allocation as follows:

a. In 1970 each major division allocate as determined by the Bureau of the Census was divided into not reported elements proportional to the subsidiary industry groups.

b. The not reported elements developed in (a) were divided by their corresponding preallocate industry groups to derive ratios. To accommodate the differing industrial structure in 1940, such ratios were also developed for "Machinery, all" and for "Other and Miscellaneous manufacturing."

c. The ratios in (b) were multiplied by the corresponding preallocate industry groups in 1960, 1950, and 1940, to derive approximate not reported elements. These latter were used as allocators for total industry not reported to derive final not reported elements.

d. Final not reported elements developed in (c) were added to the corresponding preallocate employment values to obtain postallocate employment levels.

Incomparabilities in industries published in the several censuses arise from two major sources: First, the structure of industrial detail presented changes from one census to another; and, second, the industrial classification of some economic activities undergoes change between censuses. Industrial combinations correct most of the incomparabilities arising from the first source. There remain incomparabilities attributable to the second. Changes have been made in the industrial classification system for each of the three decennial censuses since 1940 which limit the comparability of the data from one census to another. Thus, caution should be exercised to avoid placing great stress on the significance of small changes in industrial sectors over time.

Appendix table A lists the derived industrial sectors and the corresponding industrial groups in representative published tabulations from the 1940, 1950, 1960, and 1970 censuses of population together with notes on a few additional adjustments. As this table makes evident, the achievement of a higher degree of comparability in presentation through industrial combination imposes a cost in the form of sacrifice of detailed information available in one or more of the census years. 7/

Appendix table B shows for each industrial group the code designation of the similar groups in the Standard Industrial Classification (SIC). This relationship is presented for general information purposes only and does not imply complete comparability. The SIC developed under the direction of the Office of Management and Budget, is designed for the classification of reports from industrial establishments. The information in these reports is by its nature and degree of detail, considerably different from the information obtained by the census of population from household enumeration.

7/ For example, in 1970 there were 226 uniquely identified groups in the census employment classification inclusive of a newly established "allocated" line for each major group. This compares with 150 uniquely identified groups in 1960. Some relevant references:

A major difference between the two systems exists in the handling of government employees. The SIC classifies all government agencies in a single and separate major group. The data of this report (necessarily following census practice), place government workers in the same industries as private workers in similar industrial pursuits. Public administration, the 35th industry group, in the tables of this report, includes only those civilian employees of agencies which have uniquely governmental functions such as legislative, executive, and judicial whether Federal, State or local. 8/

Place of residence

An important characteristic of the census of population is that it reports employment by place of residence of the employee, even though in some cases place of residence is determined by convention. 9/ Certain other series--such as the establishment data of the Bureau of Labor Statistics and the establishment data of the Social Security Administration--present employment by place of work. The characteristics of these related series are described in other governmental documents. 10/

Even assuming that employment concepts are identical, the growth performance of a county as a place of employee residence may well differ from its growth performance as a place of employee work. For groups of counties forming a natural labor market, however, these performance differences tend to be diminished. The differences also are diminished if not eliminated through the use of economic areas. Economic areas are defined in such a way that commuting across economic area boundaries between place-of-work and place-of-residence is minimized. Each economic area, as defined by the Bureau of Economic Analysis, is formed from a grouping of counties centered on one or more metropolitan areas. 11/

8/ See industry group numbering in Appendix table B.

9/ "Members of the Armed Forces living on military installations were counted, as in every previous census, as residents of the area in which the installation was located. Similarly, members of the Armed Forces not living on a military installation were counted as residents of the area in which they were living . . .

"College students, as in 1950 and 1960, were counted as residents of the area in which they were living while attending college. Inmates of institutions, who ordinarily live there for considerable periods of time, were counted as residents of the area where this institution was located; on the other hand, patients in general hospitals who ordinarily remain for short periods of time, were counted at their homes . . .

Seasonal factor

The enumerations of the census of population are taken in each decennial census year at or near April 1. Such a count is, therefore, for many areas, somewhat different from one taken at a more active point in the employment season. Thus, the levels presented here are seasonally lower in some areas than would be annual data consisting of averages of monthly values. These and other measurement factors explain the differences between the employment levels from the decennial census of population (as presented in this study) and those from the Bureau of the Census' current population survey which forms the statistical basis for the monthly report on the labor force. 12/

Geographic classification

If the employment in a region is to be monitored over time, it is necessary that the region be of constant area. This geographic uniformity has been achieved generally through use of the county unit. The major exception to the use of county building blocks occurs in the State of Virginia which in 1970 contained 38 independent cities. 13/ Of these, 26 are presented separately. Because of the recency of their creation (subsequent to one or more of the census points), or for other reasons, it was necessary to present the remaining 12 combined with appropriate counties. 14/

Alaska and Hawaii form special cases. The detailed information for Alaska and Hawaii is inadequate in the 1940 census. Accordingly, special estimates were made to fill out the required data base for that year.

In the case of Alaska, there were multiple problems. First, there was insufficient detail in 1940 both for the territory and for the local areas. Second, the presentation of local area data moved from 4 judicial districts in 1940 and 1950, to 24 election districts in 1960, and to the more meaningful census divisions in 1970. Estimates for census division equivalents were made for 1960 only.

The major supplemental estimates required in the territory of Hawaii were those pertaining to a 1940 industrial category identified as "sugar production." Elements of this category were distributed among several industries by the Bureau of the Census following a review of the 1940 schedules to determine the industrial equivalents.

13/ By definition independent cities have areas which are excluded from counties.

Related analytical capabilities

In Growth Patterns, 1965, basic employment data for regions, States, and counties were accompanied by analyses of employment change by industry using the widely familiar "shift-share" technique. While the present publication limits itself to presentation of the basic employment data, further analytical work is proceeding both inside and outside of the U.S. Department of Commerce in the analysis of employment change.

Computer capabilities within the Bureau of Economic Analysis comprise a variety of time point and time period analytical techniques including shift-share computations for States, counties and BEA economic areas. In addition, there exist basic data handling capabilities including record search and display for selected items, record search and display for data meeting prespecified criteria, and capacity to sort, rank, code, cross tabulate and display in a variety of formats. Further information is available on request.[15]

Maps and tabulations

The preface map shows the regional grouping of States used in the Bureau of Economic Analysis. The same grouping is reflected in preface table 1, which presents the total employment data by region and State at each of four census enumeration years together with percent changes over four selected periods comprised by those years.

Preface table 2 presents the same data, for the United States only, by industry. All the items in this table represent sums of corresponding entries in county (or other local area) tables.

Figures 1 through 8 precede respectively tables 1 through 8, which present basic employment data for regions, States, and counties. Each area tabulation is in the format of preface table 2.

1/ These Standard Industrial Classification code equivalents are adapted from U.S. Bureau of the Census, Census of Population: 1970. General Social and Economic Characteristics, Final Report PC(1)-C1. U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 1972. App.B-22 to B-25. Their exact wording, however, is taken from Executive Office of the President, Bureau of the Budget, Standard Industrial Classification Manual U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 1967.

As indicated in the Census of Population reference above, "Changes have been made in the classification systems for each of the three decennial censuses since 1940, which limit the comparability of the data from one census to another." It is for this reason that this publication attempts to enhance comparability through combinations of industry groups and specific adjustments as indicated in Appendix table A. Nevertheless, some incomparabilities remain. Moreover, the basic Census and SIC systems remain fundamentally different in the industrial classification of government employees.
